Litigation Coaching

Small Claims Court of BC

For people representing themselves in small claims court, we offer litigation coaching. We can guide you through the court's rules of procedure and help you present your case.

This service is not full legal representation. We are not your counsel of record, we can't appear in court for you, we can't speak or write on your behalf, and we can't represent you generally. Some examples of how we can help include:

- case assessments
- drafting court documents
- settlement negotiations
- document discovery
- pretrial applications
- trial preparation

Unfortunately we can't help with family law matters at this time, but we're working on offering this service in the very near future.

Preparation Checklist

- The names of everyone involved in the dispute, including companies, to prevent conflicts of interest.
- A brief summary of what happened, in 500 words or less.
- The Notice of Claim, Reply, and any other court documents, in a single PDF.
- Any other documents that you would like us to review in a single PDF or Word document, up to 25 pages.
- A list of any specific questions that you would like to discuss.

Free Resources

Here are some resources that you might find helpful:

- Small Claims Rules of Court - Provincial Court of British Columbia
- Small Claims BC Online Help Guide - by the Justice Education Society of British Columbia
- CanLII: free database of Canadian legal cases, legislation and commentary.
- Courthouse Libraries BC: network of law libraries serving lawyers and the public.
